THE PLAGUE OF WEALTH, OR,
The POET's DIARY.

(In a Letter to Doctor ———.)

Dear Doctor,

THO' you expected to see me the happiest man in the world, by the extraordinary honours I receiv'd from his excellency yet I cannot forbear acquainting you that you are greatly disappointed in that respect.

Before I received his bounty (which far surpassed my hopes, and was more the effect his generosity than any merit of mine) I thought riches were so necessary an ingredient in human life, that it was scarce possible to attain to any degree of happiness without them.

I imagined, that if I had but a competent sum, I should have no care, no trouble to discompose my thoughts, nothing to withdraw my mind from virtue and the muses; but that, if possible, I should enjoy a more exalted degree of content and delight than I had hitherto. But now I perceive that kind of notions to have been the pure genuine effect of a very empty purse.

My hopes of happiness are vanished at the increase of my fortune: My opinions of things are so suddenly altered, that I am taught to pity none so much as the rich; who, by my computation, must of necessity have an income of plagues, proportioned to that of their fortunes.

I know this declaration surprizes you: but in order to convince you, I will, as exactly as possible, set down, by way of diary, the different emotions of mind which I laboured under, during the first three weeks guardianship (for I can hardly call it possession) of that same unfortunate, care-bringing fifty pounds, and I have not the least doubt but you will believe my assertion to be true.

Monday, February 18.

Received this morning the agreeable news of being ordered to wait on his excellency the lord ———, but suffered a good deal of perplexity about appearing before one in so eminent a station, and more admired and eminent for learning, and every other perfection of the mind. — Went however to his house—met with a very gracious reception—had full proof of that affability, wisdom and generosity for which his excellency is so particularly distinguished, and which I knew before only by the testimony of others — was ordered to go to Mr. T——— to receive the premium appointed by my lord.

Memorand. Imagined my stature greatly increased, walked more erect than usual—went in high spirits to the secretary's (but as a drawback to my happiness) received the dispiriting account of his being confined to his chamber — denied admittance.

Memorand. His excellency easier of access than his officer.

Tuesday 17.

The secretary still sick—paid a visit to his street door at 12—returned melancholly.

Wednesday ——— ditto
Thursday — ——— ditto
Friday ——— ditto
Saturday ——— ditto
Sunday ——— ditto

O! 'twas a dreadful interval of time!

Monday 23.

Ordered to wait again on Mr. T——; but happening to be over eager to receive the sum, I hastened away too unseasonably about half an hour after twelve, and found him asleep.

Memorand. Admitted this morning to stand in the hall, and not at the door, as hath been slanderously and maliciously reported; I presume, because it happened so at other times.

Walked in the piazzas till after one, ruminating on the various hopes and fears with which my mind had been tormented this week past——could not forbear repeating aloud the two lines of the libel, which accidentally were not more true of Mr. Addison than of my friend,

Who, grown a minister of state,
Sees poets at his levee wait.

Memorand. Not under any apprehension of being understood by any person walking there, which were only a few lawyers, and a parson or two ——.

Sauntered again to the secretary's—out of hopes—permitted now to go into a wide unfurnished apartment—in half an hour's time admitted to his presence—received a bill of fifty pounds—returned with great delight.

I now imagined that nothing was wanting to make me really happy. I pleased myself also with the thought of communicating happiness to my friends, who should share in my success, and particularly to you who are unwearied in endeavouring to promote the felicity of others. How far I was disappointed will appear in the sequel—so to proceed with my diary.

I wrapped up my bill very carefully—yet could not forbear looking at it sometimes, tho' not oftener than at every street's length. But as I was very attentively reading it, a pert swaggering fellow rushes by me—I immediately suspected an attempt upon my treasure—looked as earnestly as I dared in the fellow's face, and thought I read robbery in the lines of his countenance — so hastily slipp'd my bill into my pocket without its cover—met a friend of his excellency—but pulling out the bank note, hastily tore it in the middle—dismally frightened!—came home—shewed it to my wife—was more terrified at hearing that it would now be of no value—received several compliments from her for my care of it—and, "that I was likely to be rich, since I took such pains to preserve what I got"—and the like—went directly in a fit of anger and vexation to the bank—smiled a little, and spoke submissively to the clerk—obtained a new bill—returned again in great joy—all things settled amicably between us.

Monday night, twelve o' clock.

Went to bed as usual, but found myself violently pulled till I awoke—seized with a very great trembling, grew less concerned when I heard a voice, crying, "take care of the bill"—found immediately it proceeded from the concern of my bed-fellow, who, it seems, was as ill formed to possess great riches as myself—pitied her—told her it was safe—fell asleep soon, but was in two hours roused again with her crying—"my dear—my dear—are you sure it is safe?—don't you hear some noise there? I'll lay my life there's robbers in the room!—Lord ha' mercy upon us— what a hideous fellow I just now saw by my bedside with a drawn sword!— Or did I dream it?" I growled a little at her suspicion—slumbered—but was awakened a third time in the same manner—rose about six much discomposed——received a very solemn charge to be watchful against accidents —— "and let me beg of you, my dear, to have a great care of the bill."

Tuesday 24.

Became extremely impatient to have this tormenting bill changed into money, out of a belief that it would then be less liable to accidents—came home—spread the money upon a table to see the utmost bounds and extent of my riches. All the rest of this day sat contriving where to lay it—what part of my house would be most secure—what part of my house would be least suspected by thieves, if any should come.—Perceived my mind abundantly more disturbed at having so much money in my custody, than it was before.

Tuesday night, 11 o' clock.

Went round my house to inspect the doors, whether they were all safe——perceived a great deficiency of bars, bolts, locks, latches, door chains, window-shutters, fire arms, &c. which I had never the least notice of before. Peeped with great circumspection under the beds—resolved to watch this night and to prepare proper expedients for my security against next morning—watched accordingly.

Wednesday 25.

Extremely fatigued with last night's watching — consulted several hours about preserving my wealth, believed it most safe in bills—after mature deliberation hurried away to the bank, and took a bill for it; came away with an easier mind; and walked away about two streets length, chearfully, but began to reflect, that if my load was lighter, yet on the other hand the bill might again be torn, be dropt, mislaid; went back again in haste; once more received it money, brought it home, looked frequently behind me as I walked; hid it; resolved to lay out the greatest part of it in plate, bespoke it accordingly; prepared my fire arms, went to bed —— not one wink of sleep all this night.

Thursday 26.

Looked a little paler to day than usual, but not much concerned at that, since it was misinterpreted by my friends as the effect of hard study. Invited abroad to dinner. Went to sat down to table, but in that dreadful moment recollected that my closet, where my whole treasure was deposited, was left open; was observed to change countenance and took terrified; not Macbeth so started when he saw the ghost of murdered Banquo at the feast!

Mem. Money a perpetual apparition to a covetous mind.

—— Ran distracted home; found all safe; but returned too late for dinner. Fasted; fretted. Well saith St. Paul,—Money is the root of all evil.

Thursday night, 12 o' clock.

Hired a watchman to guard my doors; went to bed, but no sleep; those same mind-plaguing riches floated uppermost in my thoughts.—— Methinks, they cried, "Sleep no more! thy wealth has murdered sleep!" Slumbered however a little towards morning. Dreamt of nothing but robbers, assassins, spectres, flames, hurricanes. Waked in great terror.

Dear Doctor,

It would be too tedious to pursue the terrible narration any farther. Every day administered new cause of uneasiness, nor did my concern forsake me even in the midst of company and wine.

Till I had the plate sent home I was uneasy, lest after I had ordered it to be made I should be robbed of my money, and then not be able to pay for it; and when I had it once in my possession, I trembled every instant for fear of losing it for ever.

When at home, I was afraid of being murdered for my substance; and when abroad, I was as much terrified with the apprehension, that either my servants might possibly be dishonest, and so contrive to deprive me of it while I was not guarding it; or else, that by carelessness they might set fire to my house and destroy it all at once.

Every Bell I heard ring, I immediately imagined to be a fire-bell; and that alarmed me with a belief that my own house was in a blaze; so that I was plagued without interruption.

Since I have recovered myself a little, I have made an exact calculation of the quantity of pleasure and pain which I endured, and I shall give you the just balance, the fully to convince you.

A faithful account of the happiness and misery of M —— P——, clerk, for the space of eleven days, on receiving fifty pounds from his excellency lord ——

HAPPY,	d.	h.	m.
During the whole time of being with my lord, and till I went to the secretary's	0	1	0
By telling my success to several friends, and describing his excellency's person and perfections,	0	3	1
By receiving the sum from Mr T.	0	0	3
By obtaining the new bill for that which was torn, and pacifying my wife	0	3	0
Total of happiness,	0	7	4
MISERABLE.	d.	h.	m.
All the remainder,	10	16	56

To conclude. To keep my mind as calm and quiet as it was in the days of poverty, I have expended 32 l. in plate, to be a monument of his excellency's generosity to me; and that I have lodged at a rich neighbour's house for it's security; about 10 l. I have expended in fortifying my house, against the next money-misfortune that may happen to me; of which, however, at present there appears no great danger. And, if providentially my fortune be advanced, I hope to bear it with greater resolution, and to be in a better condition to preserve it. I am,

Dear doctor, your affectionate
Friend and servant.

WILLIAMSBURG, July 16.

On Wednesday the 8th instant, died at his seat at Chatsworth in the county of Henrico, the honourable Peter Randolph, Esq; who was for many years surveyor general of the middle district of America, and one of his majesty's privy council of this colony, which offices he discharged with the highest reputation and integrity. He possess'd many amiable qualifications, none of which were more distinguished than his inviolable attachment to the good of his country. His connections were extensive, and his death is greatly regretted by all his acquaintance.

QUEBEC, August 6.

Tuesday last arrived here, from Ireland, 3 transports with the 10th regiment, commanded by major Basset, who relieves the 27th regiment, commanded by colonel Massey.

BOSTON, August 10.

Last Thursday fortnight Capt. Hyslop arrived at Cape Cod Bay from London, which place he left about the 7th of June, by whom we hear, that the board of commissioners of the customs was actually established, to consist of seven, with a salary of £. 300 each: and the secretary and receiver general of the board £. 300 each: That lieut. G. Hutchinson, and Mr. secretary Oliver, would have been of the board, but are provided for another way, by salaries to be paid them out of the revenues raised on duties on several articles of commerce, by which they, with all the officers of the crown, will be rendered independent of the people: That the chief justice of the superior court was to have £. 500, and the secretary £. 300 per annum. That nothing would be attempted by way of internal taxation of the colonies: And, that the address of the house of commons to the king, in behalf of the gentlemen who suffered in the colonies during the late troubles, praying for some recompence, or peculiar marks of the royal favour to them, was graciously answered by assurances of his majesty's intention to reward them for their attachment to government.

We also hear that the act of compensation and indemnity, lately passed here, was disallowed.

PHILADELPHIA, August 13.

A gentleman at Fort Pitt, writes of the 28th of July, that the first week of that month the frost was so severe, as to spoil a garden at the east end of Laurel-hill, and killed a number of shrubs and bushes, And that on the 27th of the same month, the parties of the 31st and 34th regiments, marched into that garrison.

BOSTON, August 17.

A very beautiful schooner, called the Sultana, of between 30 and 40 tons, lately built here by Mr. Hallowell, for a gentleman in England, sailed for London yesterday. In her went passenger one Gibbons, who had been a soldier above 16 years, and lately discharged from col. Dalrymple's regiment at Halifax, by an order from the secretary at war, and arrived last week in the packet from thence: He is said to be going home to take possession of an estate that has fallen to him, of 3000 l. sterling a year, besides 7000 l. in cash.

Friday being the ever memorable anniversary of the 14th of August, a great number of gentlemen met at Liberty-Hall, under the sacred elm, which was decently decorated, and drank sundry toasts.

A letter from a gentleman in London, to a friend in America, of a late date, is said, among other matters, to contain the following paragraph, viz.

"I have just left the house of commons, quite tired out with hearing the reflections that are cast upon the colonies, owing entirely to the representations from amongst yourselves."

BOSTON, August 24.

Last week the hon. Martin Howard, Esq; chief justice of his majesty's province of North Carolina, was married to Miss Abigail Greenleaf, daughter of Stephen Greenleaf, Esq; of this town.

We hear that two whaling sloops are arrived at cape Cod, from the western islands, with about 400 barrels of oil each; they inform that the fishery has been very successful there this season.—Between 20 and 30 vessels went from these northern parts to those seas, by way of experiment, and most of them, 'tis said, have met with like success.

NEW-YORK, August 24.

We hear from Canada, that there has lately been a terrible storm there; and in the town of Montreal out of 33 steeples, 31 had been blown down. We have not yet heard any further particulars.

Capt. Tuckes from Turks-Island, informs, that many settlers have lately arrived there from Bermuda, and that the place bids fair for being, in a short time, very considerable on account of trade; that governor Seymer has appointed a council, and the inhabitants have chosen an assembly, by virtue of an order from England; and that several French sloops have lately been there, but could not dispose of their cargoes, there being very few purchasers.

PHILADELPHIA, August 27.

Extracts of sundry letters from London, of the following dates, viz.

May 9, 1767.

"THE ministry still stand their ground; and lord Chatham still continues to be incapable of giving the least attention to business of any kind. His disorder is said to be occasioned by his repeatedly repelling the fits of the gout, when he found them coming upon him, by violent medicines, which hath thrown the disease into his brain. Those who remember the brilliant figure he made during the last war; who recollect the bold and successful operations in which he was the first mover; and who still admire him as an illustrious character, must see so mortifying, and so total a change, with pity and concern.

"Nothing is yet concluded regarding your North American affairs. They were to have come on before the house of commons last week, but were postponed on account of the indisposition of the chancellor of the exchequer, who is somewhat afraid of the opposition upon this occasion. I know not what will be the issue, as both the ministry, and those out of power, are divided in opinion. Among the former C —— s T —— d is for violent methods; Mr. Conway for more lenient measures. Among the latter, G. Grenville is for supporting his first opinion regarding the stamp-act; the marquis of Rockingham the contrary. Upon the whole, I believe nothing will be decided this session; and if things remain tolerably quiet with you 'till next year, I imagine the affair will drop altogether.

May 16, 1767.

"On monday last the consideration of American affairs was to have come on, & as a full house was expected, every body but members were excluded, except the agents for the colonies, who had special leave to be present at the debates.—But so much time was spent that day upon the affairs of the East India company, that the other was adjourned until wednesday.

"On that day, when the house was about to proceed on the affairs of America, the agents were, by a fresh order, specially excluded.—The chancellor of the exchequer made a long speech, which they who heard it say was a very fine one, in which he largely expatiated on the necessity of drawing some aids from America, and yet such as should be as little as possible burthensome to them, or should actually be attended with some advantage.——Of the latter kind he proposed a duty on wine, oil, and fruit imported into the colonies from Spain, and Portugal, allowing the ships at the same time to go thither directly, without touching at England.——The others were taking off the drawback on china ware, and glass, and a duty on paper, painters colours, and tea, to be paid in America, the 25 per cent. on tea now left here, being first remitted, and the duty to be 3 d. per. pound only.——Mr. Grenvil's slighted these duties as trifles, and proposed emitting a paper currency for America by act of parliament, to be issued on loan, the interest to be disposed of by parliament.—The chancellor then said, he was coming to that, having a bill for that purpose ready to propose, insinuating, that Mr Grenville had stole his project, and prevented him.—They then went upon the affair of the disobedience of New-York, which Mr. G —— endeavoured to exaggerate.—Various proposals were made to enforce obedience for the future. One was, to lay a duty on New York, besides those on other colonies, and to apply the produce of that duty, to the subsistence of the troops in the barracks—Another, to empower their officers to quarter the troops on private houses.—Another, to empower the governor to draw on the treasurer of the province for the sums necessary, enjoining the treasurer, under a severe penalty, to pay, and indemnifying him for so doing.—Another, that an oath, by way of test, should be taken by all officers, &c. [as formerly mentioned in this paper]. At length, after long debate (for they sat 'till one in the morning) it was carried on a division, 283 to 95, to order in a bill to prohibit the governor in New-York to proceed in legislation with the assembly, by consenting to any act of theirs, 'till they had yielded obedience to the act of parliament here, for quartering of soldiers in America.—The minority consisted of those who were against all severe compulsory measures, among whom was Secretary CONWAY.

"The ministry have, in fact, been greatly embarrassed with this affair, being pressed upon it by the Opposition early in the session, which drew from them an inconsiderate promise, that they should take some measures or other, which they hastily admitted were necessary, in order to support the sovereignty of this country;—for there is reason to think, that had they been left to themselves, they would gladly have let the matter sleep, and given the colonies time to recollect themselves, and to have come voluntarily into what is here called their duty. But the Opposition will not suffer this; and all the real goodwill that the ministry can procure for the colonies seems to be this, that nothing done by one delinquent colony, should draw inconveniencies on the rest, that have not given offence; and that this last mentioned measure with New York, as the mildest of those proposed, should be taken, something being necessary to quiet the clamours of the Opposition, and to save the honour of parliament.

June 12, 1767.

"During the debates relating to North-America, and the East India company, none have of late been admitted besides the members. They still remain sitting, and will continue so, till towards the end of this month. With regard to North-America, an act is brought in, and will certainly pass, disabling the assemblies of New-York and Georgia to pass any law, and render invalid every resolution or vote, that they shall make (other than a vote for adjourning such assemblies) until they have fully complied with the several acts of parliament made here, for the quartering of soldiers in the colonies. How this will be relished, or what effect it will have with you, time will discover. For my own part I am, as a well-wisher to both parties, extremely sorry, that matters are not in a better way of being accommodated, without being obliged to have recourse to irritating measures, by which both sides will in the end be sufferers, and our common enemies the sole gainers. But as I am far from being apt to despond, I still hope that things will at length take a conciliating turn.

"As for the ministry, there is at present no talk of any immediate changes: I think it is most likely, as they have wrestled through the session so far, they will keep their stations till towards winter.—But as the friends of the Devonshire, Bedford, Newcastle, Grenville, and Rockingham families are, I am well informed, now firmly united, there is not the least doubt but they will get into power again about that time.

NEW-YORK, August 31.

We hear that two or three vessels, with 2500 barrels of flour, are arrived at the mouth of the Mississippi, from Philadelphia.

From Rhode Island we have advice, that a few days ago, a brig. bound in to that island, from Jamaica, belonging to Mr. Malbone, was set on fire by the carelessness of a boy in drawing rum, off Point Judah, by which accident the vessel was burnt down, and five women lost their lives.

Wednesday one Timothy Green, who arrived here from North Carolina on Tuesday night last, applied to an engraver in this city, to procure him plates to counterfeit the current money bills of North-Carolina.—The engraver had him taken before an alderman, who, after examination, committed him to goal. We hear that false dollars were found in his possession.

PHILADELPHIA, September 3.

Saturday last the Admonition transport sailed from hence for Europe, having on board the remainder of the Royal Highland regiment, lately arrived from the frontiers of this province.

WE hear that a few days ago the first volume in manuscript of Mr. Wilkes's history of England, was sold to a bookseller at the court end of the town for six hundred guineas.

It is computed, that there are upwards of 17,600 French natives, of both sexes, now employed in the education of our youth, in the several schools and academies in this kingdom.

We hear that expresses have been sent to the right hon. Earl Temple, and William Dowdeswell, Esq; desiring their attendance in town.

By a letter from Edinburgh we learn, that on the determination of the Douglass cause the lords seemed to express themselves in such a way, that it is imagiand they will not sequestrate the estate, and consequently deprive Douglass of possession, till the final determination by the peers of Great-Britain.

A young lady, said to be heiress to a considerable fortune in the North of England, lately made her escape from a Popish convent at Boulogne in France, where she had been confined upwards of nine years.

On Thursday last general Cornwallis arrived at Portsmouth, in order to embark on board his majesty's ship Gates Æolus, for his government of Gibraltar. And on saturday the Æolus sailed out of the harbour for Spithead.

Sunday arrived in St. James's street, the princess Poniatowski, sister to the king of Poland.

Edinburgh, July 15. Yesterday the court of session decided in the long-depending cause, between his grace the duke of Hamilton, and Archibald Douglas, Esq; The court sat on this important question from Tuesday last week, when after eight days spent in delivering their opinions on this cause, their lordships decided in favour of the family of Hamilton, by reducing the service of Mr. Douglass, as heir to the late duke of Douglass.

LONDON, JULY 23.

We hear that basis of the new ministry is founded on a coalition between the duke of Bedford, duke of Newcastle, marquis of Rockingham, and the right hon. Mr. George Grenville.

It is said that the decree given in Scotland, in favour of the Hamilton family, is not final; and that an appeal will be made next sessions to the right hon. house of peers for a rehearing.

Yesterday Sir George Macartney, lately arrived from his embassy at the court of Russia waited on his majesty at St. James's, and had the honour of a long conference with his majesty.

The marquis of Rockingham was at the levee yesterday.

JULY, 25.

The lord bishop of London, in obedience to his majesty's commands communicated to him by the archbishop of Canterbury, has sent circular letters to the parochial clergy in his diocese, requiring them to procure as correct and complete lists as can be obtained, of all papists or reputed papists within the same, distinguishing their parishes, sexes, ages, occupations, and how long they have been resident there.

A letter from Corsica, dated June. 30, says "It is believed that the republic of Genoa will not much longer delay to acknowledge that they have made but ineffectual efforts to oblige us to become again dependent on them. From what we have undertaken for liberty, and the successes we have met with, they may judge of what we may be further able to effect; and comprehending at length, that it will be impossible for them to subdue us, they will abandon the design, especially as a report prevails that the court of France is about withdrawing her troops from our island."

Yesterday, after the leves, there was a grand council at St. James's, which did not break up till five o'clock.

We hear that twelve ships of war, of forty guns and upwards, are ordered to be repaired and fitted up for station service, the West India stationed ships being ordered to be relieved in the begining of September next at farthest, several of them having been their full stationed time of three years already.

A melancholly affair happened at Rotherhithe last week. A young lady, an American by birth, who had come over from Carolina some years ago to be educated here, lodged and boarded at a captain of a ship's house in Rotherhithe aforesaid. She was the only child of a very rich planter, and was to have gone home very soon. Having been with a party of young gentlemen and ladies at St. Helena gardens, she accidentally slipped into one of the fish-ponds, but was presently got out again; she persisted however in not changing her cloaths (as the weather was warm) until she got home; where, after having so done, she sat down with the family in seeming good health and spirits to supper, and was very chearful afterwards; but (whether it proceeded from a cold caught by the accident, or from a too free indulgence of her appetite with strawberries and cream at the gardens, or some other latent complaint, is not known) she was found dead in her bed the next morning.

JULY 28.

Last Saturday's Gazette contains his majesty's order in council, for permitting the free importation into Great-Britain of wheat, and wheat flour, by any of his majesty's subjects, from any parts of his dominions in America, from the expiration of the time limited by an act of the last session for the importation thereof, viz. the 1st of August, until the 1st of February 1768, under the regulations mentioned in two acts of last session relating to the importation of corn.

Prince Poniatowski, own brother to the king of Poland, and consort to the princess of that name, who is now in England, is expected here next month.

Capt. Botterell is appointed to the command of his majesty's ship Squirrel.

From the marquis of Rockingham's setting out for his seat in Yorkshire, and several other of the nobility for their respective seats, 'tis now generally supposed no changes will take place during the summer months.

'Tis asserted that a noble M——s, in a late conference held at M——e-house, did very honourably insist and persevere in his patriotic and consistent determination of routing out of the Ad————n every spark of the E—l of B—e's influence. This has only superseded, but not totally frustrated, the execution of that salutary plan, which the three great parties met to settle.

The intended alterations in the ministry are laid aside for the present, as the demands made by some parties were too exorbitant to be complied with.

We hear that great preparations are making at the seat of the earl of Bute, at Luton Hoo, in Bedfordshire, for the entertainment of the princess Poniatowski, who is expected there this week.

On Friday Sir George Macartney had the honour of a private conference with his majesty at St. James's.

The CHIMNEY SWEEPER.

HOW each fond parent still pursues
Ambition in his children's views!
Wou'd have his heir be something more,
Than what the father was before!
The Bailiff makes his son a Proctor;
Th'Apothecary his, a Doctor:
And husband ever joins with wife,
That Tom shou'd push himself in life.
A Chimney-sweeper and his Fair,
The sooty partner of his care.
(For fair's a term, we common find
For black, or brown, and all the kind)
Indulging in their homely cheer
Of bread and cheese, and good strong beer,
(For then good nature might afford
A foaming pot to grace the board,
Ere half-penny's advance in price
Made poor folks grow more wise than nice)
With mutual wish and anxious joy,
Gaz'd on their only hope, a boy.
When the fond dame, whom fancy led
To fashion castles in her head,
Buss'd with a smack her nown good man,
Then took a draught, and thus began:
Sure Tommy's vastly grown, my dear.
'Come hither, child—I say, come here.
'Hold up thy head—ah—he's not made
'For such a vast laborious trade;
'He has not strength to buffle through
'Nor writhe his body like a screw.
'Lard! he has genus far above
'What you and I have been, my love;
'Some gentler trade were not amiss'—
'Go child—go—give papa a kiss.'
Then looking kind at one another,
Grim first kiss'd child, and after mother.
Why, dame, quoth he, why all this fuss?
This boy, our Tom, is all to us;
And han't I toil'd from year to year,
But for his sake, and thine, my dear?
And shall not Tom then make a figure,
As big as father does?—aye, bigger.
For, zounds! it never shall be said,
That Grim's own son was basely bred;
While barber Scrape puts out his fool
To learn to read at grammar-school.
Come hither, lad, look up, be bold:
Ay, there it is, my heart of gold:
Thou shalt complete thy father's joy
And be a Bricklayer, my boy;
Shalt build the chimney, and not creep
Through those thy father us'd to sweep.
